The Art of Seduction is a 2017 South Korean romantic comedy film directed by Kim Jee-woon, starring Kim Woo-bin and Park Bo-young. This unique love story set in modern day Seoul follows the story of an audacious girl who is determined to pass her life's second chance at finding true love. The movie was released on November 10, 2017 in South Korea. Joo Eun (Park Bo-young) leaves behind her family for a job as an art director in the creative industry. She charms people with her creative eye but gets bullied by others due to her height. Meanwhile, Jang Hyun (Kim Woo-bin) is a star art director who goes through the motions of life without passion. Although he is admired by people around him, he finds it difficult to find love due to his frank nature. The two meet each other during a flight and are charmed by each other's beauty. They start their journey of love but things are not as easy as they seem...

Director Kim Jee-woon was initially offered the script by the film's producer, Kim Ji-suk, in 2013. Kim Jee-woon originally declined the offer but later spent three years mulling over it before deciding to take on the project. Most of the cast from "The Good, The Bad, The Weird" made a cameo appearance in the film. In March 2017, Kim Woo-bin revealed his desire to work with Director Kim Jee-woon on a third film set for release in 2020.

The original soundtrack was released on December 10, 2017 by BMG Rights Management Korea, translatable to English as "Sounds Of Seduction". It features 12 tracks composed by Lee Soo-hyun and lyrics written by Park Yong-ha. A majority of the songs featured in the film are cover versions of well known love ballads (eg. Seohyun's "Lalala"), but there are also original tunes (eg. Jang Hyun's "JINGJING"). "The Art of Seduction" was released on November 10, 2017 in South Korea.
